Video Recordings and Lecture Transcripts of Local and National Patient Carcinoid/NET Conferences

SPECIAL NOTE: Video recordings from 2005 through 2009 may only be available in audio mode while an upgrading of technology services is in progress during the first half of 2015. We appreciate your understanding.

Several patient-oriented carcinoid seminars and conferences are held each year. In this section, you can find videos and lecture transcripts by prominent carcinoid and neuroendocrine tumor (NETs) specialists.

These lecture transcripts, and video recordings give both simple and more in-depth information about carcinoid and other neuroendocrine tumors (NETs). We suggest that patients read and listen to these transcripts after reading the initial general information for patients.

In 2012, the Carcinoid Cancer Foundation began a new series of videos featuring carcinoid/NET specialists and patients. Read more about the series here. These videos are made possible thanks to the generosity of Kim, Heather and Lauren Simpson and other family and friends and were created in "loving memory of Cheryl Stanley Simpson of Gainesville, Florida."

Carcinoid/NETs: Moving Forward, a day-long conference sponsored by the New Jersey Carcinoid Cancer NETwork on November 2, 2013, gave participants the opportunity to learn more about recent developments regarding these rare diseases; surgical treatment options, including what's currently available and what will be coming next; how neuroendocrine tumors (NETs) are treated; what are the neuroendocrine symptoms and diseases associated with carcinoid; and everything you always wanted to know about PRRT (peptide receptor radionuclide therapy) but didn't know who to ask. The conference featured carcinoid/NET specialists Dr. Richard R.P. Warner, Dr. Eric H. Liu, and Dr. Yi-Zarn Wang, as well as endocrinologist Dr. Justina Deitz.

The first video below is an introduction to the conference and gives the patient, physician, and advocate perspectives on the value of attending carcinoid/NET conferences.

With deepest appreciation to the Carcinoid Cancer Texas Survivors Support Group for sponsoring, videotaping, and giving permission to the Carcinoid Cancer Foundation to share this special presentation featuring carcinoid/NET specialist Eric H. Liu, MD, Director of the Neuroendocrine Center at Vanderbilt University Medical Center in Nashville, Tennessee. "Neuroendocrine Cancer: Making Sense of the Disease" was held on June 8, 2013 at Baylor Hospital in Dallas, Texas.

Dr. Liu's talk is shared here in 3 parts, with the last part being the Questions and Answers session.

    - "This conference represents the cutting edge of medical information dispersal. Getting life saving information to patients with this exceedingly rare disease allows the patient to educate their local doctors rather than the usual paradigm in which physicians are the ones with the knowledge." ### Abstract

The rationale underlying an aggressive approach in the management of some carcinoid patients is explained and illustrated by the presented case of a middle-aged man with advanced classic typical midgut carcinoid. The patient exhibited somatostatin receptor scintigraphy positive massive liver metastases, Carcinoid Syndrome, severe tricuspid and pulmonic cardiac valve disease with congestive heart failure, ascites, and malnutrition. He had been treated for several years with supportive medications and biotherapy including octreotide and alpha interferon but his tumor eventually progressed and his overall condition was markedly deteriorated when he first sought more aggressive treatment. This consisted of prompt replacement of both tricuspid and pulmonic valves, followed by hepatic artery chemoembolus injection and then surgical tumor debulking including excision of the primary tumor in the small intestine. In addition, radiofrequency ablation was utilized to reduce the volume of metastases in the liver. Prophylactic cholecystectomy was also performed and a biopsy of tumor was submitted for cell culture drug resistance testing. This was followed by systemic chemotherapy utilizing the drug (docetaxel) which the in vitro studies suggested as most likely to be effective. His excellent response to this succession of treatments exemplifies the successful application of aggressive sequential multi-modality therapy.
