Lauren M. Fishbein, MD, PhD, MTR

Lauren M. Fishbein, MD, PhD, MTR is an Assistant Professor in Medicine at the University of Colorado School of Medicine in the Division of Endocrinology, Metabolism and Diabetes with a secondary appointment in the Division of Biomedical Informatics and Personalized Medicine. She received her bachelor's degree in Biochemistry from Vassar College and earned her MD, PhD degree from the University of Florida with a PhD in Molecular Genetics. She completed her Internal Medicine Residency at Harvard's Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston and her Endocrinology Fellowship at the University of Pennsylvania where she also completed a Master's in Translational Research. Her research and clinical interests are in neuroendocrine tumor genetics with a special focus on pheochromocytomas and paragangliomas. Dr. Fishbein has a strong interest in personalized medicine including understanding the impacts and implications of germline predisposition genetics, as well as understanding tumor development and transformation to aggressive and metastatic disease. Among her contributions to the field, she, along with her collaborators, was the first to report the association between somatic ATRX mutations and aggressive pheochromocytoma, and she was the data coordinator for The Cancer Genome Atlas (TCGA) integrative genomics study on pheochromocytoma and paraganglioma. She has served and continues to serve on committees for the Endocrine Society, and she is currently a member of the Guidelines and Publications Committee for the North American Neuroendocrine Tumor Society.
